Prosperity And Poverty.

Our country has gone by leaps and bounds in material growth during the last five years. In commerce it stands first among the nations. A large portion of the world's food comes from its great centers, as never before known in the world's history. Its gold reserve is larger than that of any other two nations combined. Savings banks show large additions to their deposits. Kansas alone has over eighty millions of dollars in her banks, a large portion of this is owned by farmers, which shows that mortgages have gone out of fashion. And yet in the midst of so much prosperity is heard the wail of the poor and starving in the large cities. During the holidays this was brought forcibly to our knowledge. From one end of our country to the other the newspapers held up to our view the great army of the poor fed on Christmas day. In Kansas City over five thousand were fed. In the midst of so much abundance why is there so much poverty? While we are seeking for foreign markets for our surplus products, thousands of half-starved women and children abound in our land. Why have we such destitution in our large cities?

Trusts and combines may be responsible for some of it. But no one who has given any thought to the saloon and its intimate relation to the poverty stricken districts around it can be in doubt as to the cause of the greatest portion of it. Our system of including Pres. Roosevelt Bryan and scores of others are considering how to protect the people from the unrighteous greed of these monopolies but not one of them has a word to say about the biggest trust and monopoly of them all—The Whiskey Trust.

The best trust gives us beef even if it is costly. The steel trust furnishes material vitally essential to our civilization even if its charges be extortionate. Railways may be plundering and so of other trusts. They may rob us but we receive that by which we are benefited. But the Whiskey Trust is an unmitigated curse and where it has its great stronghold there the people are the most degraded and impoverished. The poverty which comes to our front so unpleasantly at Christmas times is there all the time and can be accounted for if we bring the saloon into point of view. The poor are held in its huge coils and are helpless. They cry but we heed them not. A short time ago we liberated Cuba from the bondage of Spain. Shall we do less for those in our midst?

In Memory Of Elsie Meyer.

Once again the hand of death Has cast a shadow here And taken one from our midst Of all was fond and dear.

Elsie was truly a flower of earth She was not out here to stay, But gladly performed the task God assigned, And then he took her away.

Her life had been so true, That when death she met, There was nothing to recall, And nothing to regret.

The family tie was broken, When Elsie was called away. On earth they will be separated, But in heaven they'll meet again.

To her parents she was always A true pride and joy, For her life was pure and spotless As gold without alloy.

For her sisters and her brothers There was nothing that she wouldn't do To make their pleasures many, And their troubles few.

As associate and schoolmate; But this we will deny, For words will not half explain What we would like to say.

—A FRIEND.
